Background

Prewrite, an established software development company based in Lithuania, is the creator of Eylean Board – an electronic Kanban and Scrum board. Eylean Board is collaboration software for the agile software development teams which use either Kanban or Scrum. The concept is based on Kanban board (and Scrum board as well), visualizing tasks as virtual sticky notes and moving them through the board during the development process. Software Engineer Paulius Putna takes up the story.

Requirement

“We needed a straightforward licensing solution. After doing some research and talking to some people who already have experience in this field, they suggested that developing our own licensing would not be sufficient and buying one “off the shelf” would be much better. So we looked at what was available in the market, and we found InishTech.

Solution

“We use the Software Potential service to apply licensing to our application. We have trial and commercial SKU’s. The trial key is sent automatically once a signed up user downloads the trial application.”

Benefits

“What I loved about the InishTech licensing solution is that I can have a single installation built for any type of license schema. I did some custom coding to show the trial window for each start up, but that was about it. I really like how we can control licensing without coding it directly into the application, where it impacts the user experience and affects their installation etc.

What’s the best thing about InishTech? Support! Hands down! I was really amazed at how thorough and quick their responses were. You don’t see this every day with other companies. Keep it up guys!”
